About the Publication

The Phoenix-Area Major Employers Guide is designed primarily for those seeking employment in the Phoenix metropolitan area. It is hoped that this publication will be especially helpful to the many newcomers who are unfamiliar with the “Valley of the Sun” and the location of its largest employers. This publication is a companion to the Arizona Job Seekers Guide and lists addresses and telephone numbers of major employers.

Additional lists of employers, as well as other sources of job information for metropolitan Phoenix, can be found in publications and resources listed in both the Arizona Job Seekers Guide and the Arizona Labor Market Information Directory — both published by the Department of Economic Security, Research Administration. And finally, when pursuing employment in government, obtain a copy of Applying for Government Jobs from the Research Administration at the address provided on page i or when visiting your nearest Arizona Job Service office.

In metropolitan Phoenix, more than 95 percent of all businesses employ fewer than 100 workers, yet these same businesses account for only about 45 percent of the total number of workers. Both locally and nationally, recent years have seen greater employment growth in smaller firms. For this reason, it is recommended that this publication be used in conjunction with other resources to enhance the likelihood of a successful job search.

Provided in this guide is an alphabetical list of the largest employers in metropolitan Phoenix. The list indicates the primary activity of each employer as well as the address, telephone number (usually a job hotline), and an Internet address when available. Also indicated is a grid index that can be used to determine each employer's location on the accompanying map.

This employer guide also includes addresses of the many One-Stop Career Centers located in metropolitan Phoenix. These centers provide customers with a wide range of employment and training programs and services.

When using this publication, please note the following:

- The employers list usually provides a map location of the primary site or plant and the phone number of the hiring facility.
- The map location for businesses with more than one location is shown as “Multiple Sites.” If hiring for all locations is done at one site, that address and its map location is also provided.

- The employer-locator map is not to scale and does not include all streets. Therefore, the map should be only used to find general locations.
- Included with the map are areas designated “Major Pockets of Employment,” where significant concentrations of employment can be found. A legend preceding the map lists major industry groups (e.g., manufacturing, retail trade) associated with each pocket of employment. For the most part, businesses in the industries specified will be found in these areas, but companies in other industries are located in these pockets as well.

About Metropolitan Phoenix

Centrally located within the state, Arizona's largest metropolitan area (Maricopa and Pinal counties) includes more than 40 communities and employs more than two-thirds of the state's labor force. Maricopa County is the most populated of the state's fifteen counties and is one of the fastest growing in the country. Economically, Pinal County also is developing rapidly and its predominantly rural nature is changing. By the year 2000, Research Administration projects that these two counties will be home to more than 3 million inhabitants.

The metro area's largest cities and their estimated 1998 populations: Phoenix (1,220,710), Mesa (361,895), Tempe (159,220), Scottsdale (195,495), Glendale (196,820), Chandler (160,165), and Peoria (89,930). Most of the area's population and job growth in the 1980s and '90s occurred in these cities, but some smaller cities (Gilbert, Goodyear, Avondale) also experienced strong growth during that time. The availability of less expensive land is encouraging many employers to look at less-populated areas of the county for location of production and warehouse facilities.

The businesses listed in this publication reflect the prominence of service producing sectors, such as retail trade, health care, and tourism (e.g., hotels). Not coincidentally, these industries are also the fastest growing. But metropolitan Phoenix maintains a strong manufacturing base as well (more than 170,000 wage and salary jobs in 1998), with half employed in high-tech sectors. Also, in recent years the metro area has experienced strong job growth in construction, in response to the demand for single- and multiple-family housing, as well as commercial and industrial space. In addition, the area has become a major distribution center for the West, with strong growth in the wholesale trade and transportation (particularly trucking) sectors. Passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) has bolstered employment in the wholesale trade and trucking sectors.

In 1998, the major industry employment profile of metropolitan Phoenix was as follows: manufacturing, 170,200, 11.6%; mining, 5,700, .4%; construction, 105,200, 7.2%; transportation, communication, public utilities (TCPU), 74,700, 5.1%; trade, 353,700, 24.2%; finance, insurance, and real estate (FIRE), 116,900, 8.0%; services, 451,400, 30.9%; and government, 182,200, 12.5%. Wages in Arizona and metropolitan Phoenix in 1998 averaged $29,264 and $31,132, respectively
